

Do you work with LGBTQ youth in our communities or schools?

training:
SUPPORTING LGBTQ YOUTH

in our communities

Wondering what you can do to support the LGBTQ youth and help them build resiliency? Wondering how to reduce bullying and harassment? What does the terminology mean/ How to use gender-neutral pronouns? How to support the youth you work with who are transitioning or questioning?

Join us for this informative training. Bring your questions!

Presented by: Sue Campbell, Program Director, OUT Maine

Sue directs programming for LGBTQ youth in rural Maine. Including after-school programming, building Gay/Straight/Trans Alliances in secondary schools to make schools safe and affirming and creating a strong safety net of informed, supportive providers through training and ongoing support of health and mental health care providers, clergy, school staff, crisis workers and youth service organizations. Sue also is the parent of a trans son, who is currently a college student. She has first-hand experience in supporting the transition process and working with family issues around transitioning, giving her expertise that supports youth, families and efforts to make system change toward a welcoming and affirming community.
